In the dystopian world of Neal Shusterman's Unwind Dystology, human life is a mere commodity, and teenagers are stripped of their rights and freedoms.

The Premise of Unwind

The series takes place in a future United States where the Second Civil War has left the nation fragmented. In the aftermath, a constitutional amendment known as the "Bill of Life" granted parents the right to "unwind" their children between the ages of 13 and 18. Unwinding involves disassembling the child's body and distributing their organs for transplant.

The rationale behind unwinding is ostensibly to prevent abortion and reduce the burden on society, but it masks a sinister truth. The elite and wealthy use unwinding to prolong their lives and enhance their physical

Unsouled: A Journey of Identity and Resistance

Unsouled, the first book in the series, introduces us to Connor, Risa, and Lev, three teenagers who face the threat of unwinding. Connor is a ward of the state, destined for unwinding unless he can prove his worthiness to society. Risa is a tithe, raised by her parents with the sole purpose of being unwound. Lev is a runaway from a Planned Parenthood facility, determined to escape the horrors of unwinding.

As these three unlikely allies embark on a perilous journey to find sanctuary, they question the ethics of unwinding and the value of human life. They encounter both allies and enemies, including the secretive "Stork" who helps children escape unwinding and the ruthless "Juvey-cops" who ruthlessly enforce the law.
